

The Role of Medicine in Population Control and Civilization Building from the Dawn of Civilization until the Present Time

Kevin Galalae

Founder and Director, Center of Global Consciousness, Ayr, Ontario, Canada

Corresponding author

Kevin Mugur Galalae, Founder and Director, Center of Global Consciousness Ayr, Ontario, Canada, E-mail: k.galalae@outlook.com

Submitted: 03 Feb 2018; Accepted: 13 Feb 2018; Published: 28 Feb 2018

What I am about to say will make all doctors reconsider whether they will remain in the profession or look for a different one. It will also irrevocably change the way doctors practice medicine and how people in the general population view medicine. More importantly, it will forever alter the relationship between medicine and society. And last, it will change the profession and society in ways that we can scarcely fathom but that will greatly reduce the profession's footprint and influence and greatly increase individual and general wellbeing.

Since the dawn of civilization medicine has been inextricably linked with politics and has served power in noble and insidious ways to accomplish the hidden goals of the fundamental laws of civilization building, laws that have never been written down and constitute not only the most precious knowledge but also the deepest and most closely guarded secret of the highest echelon of power.

The four laws of civilization building are:

1. That you have to limit the quantity of life to improve the quality and you must do it selectively to aid and accelerate the process of natural selection and improve the intelligence and genetic makeup of the stock.
2. That you have to slow down population growth to remain within the technical ability of society to produce food and build infrastructure and you have to do it by any means necessary because failing to do it will have only negative consequences.
3. That once you get close to the planet's carrying capacity you have to stabilize the population in perpetuity and stabilize it at a level that is sustainable for any given planet, so the planet's life support systems are not damaged in which case intelligent life would unintelligently sow the seed of its own destruction.
4. That once a state of harmony is reached between civilization and nature all subsequent progress depends on society's ability to reduce the number of people in direct but inverse proportion with the per capita increase in the consumption of resources and that this reduction has to be accomplished with everyone's free and conscious collaboration. In other words, the more technologically advanced our civilization becomes the fewer people can be accommodated on planet earth and all people must contribute to mankind's reduction in numbers to enable mankind's ascension in level of civilization.

These laws of civilization building have to my knowledge never been written down. They have never been written down for the obvious reason that it is the only way to keep them secret and pursue them in secret. They are the Holy Grail of organized religion and of their secular progeny, the United Nations, as well as of the highest level of government in almost every country on earth.

Time line

The first part of the first law, namely that you have to limit the quantity of human life to improve the quality, was conceived around 3000 BC in Egypt and recreated by me in 2012. The second part of the first law, namely that you must aid and accelerate the process of natural selection through social selection to improve the intelligence and genetic makeup of the stock, was conceived around 1000 AD in Europe, Asia and the Americas, and recreated by me in 2014, but was practiced unconsciously throughout the world and across cultures through infanticide, ritual murder, human sacrifice, cannibalism and headhunting.

By its first part, namely that you have to limit the quantity of human life to improve the quality, this law gave rise to the great civilizations of Egypt, India and China. And by its second part, namely that you must aid and accelerate the process of natural selection through social selection to improve the intelligence and genetic makeup of the stock, it shaped all civilizations.

The second law, namely that you have to slow down population growth to remain within the technical ability of society to produce food and build infrastructure, was conceived around 1400 AD at the Vatican, and recreated by me in 2015. It gave rise to modern Europe in three steps: the Renaissance, the Enlightenment and the Industrial Revolution.

The third law, namely that once you get close to the planet's carrying capacity you have to stabilize the population in perpetuity and stabilize it at a level that is sustainable for any given planet, was conceived around 2000 at the UN, and recreated by me in 2016. It gave rise to the Brundtland Report, the Millennium Development Goals and more recently to the Sustainable Development Goals.

And the fourth law, namely that once a state of harmony is reached between civilization and nature all subsequent progress depends on society's ability to reduce the number of people in direct but inverse proportion with the per capita increase in the consumption of resources, was conceived by me this year, 2017. It will give rise to a New Axial Age, a Planetary Wellbeing Authority and a new socio-political model that I have tentatively called naturocracy.

The Role of Medicine

You are undoubtedly asking "what does medicine have to do with this"? Everything! Doctors, consciously and unconsciously, have always served religious and secular authorities in the accomplishment of the unwritten laws of civilization building.

Shamans or witchdoctors, who were the first doctors and priests all in one, and who predate all organized religions and certainly all organized medicine going back as far as the Upper Paleolithic era to c. 30,000 BC (before Christ) or BCE (before common era), are the first controllers of human life on the planet, both in terms of behavior and numbers.

They assumed the roles crucial to civilization building and monopolized those functions: namely healing individuals and communities, leading a sacrifice, preserving the tradition, guiding souls, fortune telling, and resource conservation. They monopolized those roles by keeping secret the knowledge of medicinal plants and herbal treatments; by making the training of the next generation of shamans lengthy and dependent on mythologies, rituals and symbols and by controlling the training and the rituals, mythologies and symbols; by claiming to possess exclusive powers such as the power to communicate with spirits and to enter the supernatural world to search for answers; by deciding who inherits the role of shaman, which more often than not was passed down from father to son; and by restricting hunting and fishing to prevent resource depletion.

Doctors have maintained some of those monopolies to this day by patenting drugs and having exclusive rights to prescribe them and to decide on treatment methods and restrictions, by strictly limiting the number of doctors and retaining sole control over the profession through self-regulating medical associations, by excluding alternative medicine from the market, by defining what constitutes an illness and therefore deciding who is sick and who is healthy, by having the last word on who is helped to live and who is left to die, and by their involvement in subverting fertility and longevity to stabilize the population and prevent competition for resources and resource depletion.

Methods for First Law

Shamans have applied the first law of civilization building, namely limiting the quantity of life to preserve the quality, by deciding when to leave the old behind to die rather than carry them along and when to kill babies that were not normal, healthy or strong enough to be allowed to live. They have thus pared life at both ends, birth and death, to keep the tribe within the available resources. They did this, of course, forced by dire circumstances for bare survival and not as a proactive and conscious way to make life better and certainly not with the aim of improving the genetic stock. Nevertheless this is the humble origin of the first law of civilization building.

In time the profession of the shaman split in two and doctors and priests have since shared the rights and responsibilities of civilization building that were once fulfilled solely by the shaman. Priests and doctors have been partners in population control ever since this split occurred; a split that took place at various times depending on place and culture.

Priests took over the role of leading a sacrifice, preserving the tradition, guiding souls, and fortune telling or divination, while doctors took over the role of healing disease and of deciding who is helped to live and who is left to die. The role of controlling population for resource conservation has been shared equally by doctors and priests ever since the split took place and this continues to be the case to this day. What has changed over time is that knowledge of and the decision making power to keep the population within resources has been transferred to the highest echelons of power of doctors and priests and the common doctors and priests have ever since been clueless that they serve a population control purpose and how they serve this hidden purpose until I came along.

As human societies grew larger and more complex the need to control population growth to stay within the available resources became increasingly more important and the nobility was brought onboard to form a population control trinity with doctors and priests. Political authorities have since provided legal cover to doctors and priests so they can commit genocide for population control purposes.

Methods for Second Law

The second law of civilization building, namely that you have to slow down population growth to remain within the technical ability of society to produce food and build infrastructure, was born at a time in our history when societies were already stratified into social classes and specialized and a good proportion of the population depended on others for food production. It was born from the understanding that it is best to preempt famine and war by preventing the population from outgrowing resources, which invariably happens within two generations, because in a natural state of population growth where fertility is unimpeded by social or chemical means the population doubles every 20 years. To double the arable land and the infrastructure to keep pace with the doubling of the population at a time when everything was done by hand was not always possible, which is why slowing down population growth became necessary.

Ever since, the Vatican and the European nobility along with the highest echelon of the medical profession have been partners in genocide and became partners in genocide to escape the vicious cycle of famine and war, which was brought about by resource scarcity due to population growth. War destroys people and infrastructure. Population control, however, destroys only people but preserves infrastructure and thus does not set back civilization. As horrible as controlling population growth through genocide is it is certainly an improvement over famine and war and an indispensable tool of civilization building.

The institutions of marriage and monasticism, and the practice of witch burning by the Inquisition were methods of social engineering used to slow down population growth and to balance the number of men and women in society, which was particularly important in a society where women could not own property and monogamy was enshrined in law. But these were not enough to halt population growth, it only slowed it down, and every second generation famine and war ensued, trapping humanity in a vicious cycle. To escape this vicious cycle a way had to be found to get ahead of the curve demographically and biological warfare was added to the arsenal of population control methods, which is why the bubonic plague was spread every 40 to 60 years to trim back the population by a third and thus bring it back within resources.

The problem with war is that it kills only males and then you are left with an excess of females that would have to somehow be cared for outside the institution of marriage since there were not enough husbands to go around in the aftermath of war. Pestilence kills both sexes in equal measure and spares the infrastructure. Moreover it costs nothing. It is therefore a much cheaper and more effective way to combat population growth. It is also a great way to concentrate land, property and wealth into fewer hands and thus to suddenly raise the standard of living.

Every strategy for population control has always been hidden behind God.

Take the institution of monasticism, for instance. By persuading a large proportion of the population that celibacy is a necessary precondition of service to God and far more desirable than marriage, family life and child-bearing, and by enshrining the desirability of abstinence, obedience, humility and poverty in canon law, the Church found a rather elegant way to prevent millions of men and women from making use of their reproductive organs and from exercising their God-given reproductive rights thus effectively suppressing population growth to a significant degree.

The institution of marriage too was created to limit childbearing to married couples only. And any children born out of wedlock were considered an offense to God and more often than not drowned shortly after birth.

And the burning of women and heretics by the Inquisition was also justified as divine punishment for offences committed against God.

All other cultures also hid their population control methods behind God.

Pre-Columbian civilizations used human ritual sacrifice of horrendous proportions to keep or bring the population back within the available resources, which is why their civilizations flourished. And in the process they picked the weakest among them to sacrifice therefore aiding the process of natural selection. They hid their intent behind God so that no man could challenge them. All human sacrifices were justified as offerings to the gods to either incur divine favor or avoid divine retribution. But the reality is that pre-Columbian civilizations practiced population control through mass murder.

Islamic societies castrated huge numbers of men and stuck women in harems to be guarded by eunuchs and remain childless and sex starved for the remainder of their lives. Islam also turned society into a cloister for women by restricting their movement and covering their bodies at all times so as not to entice men. Islam therefore practiced population control through the castration of males and the isolation of women.

And Hindus relegated a good proportion of the population to untouchable status, thus the lowest social caste to condemn them to extreme poverty and death as soon as famine struck and in this fashion relieve material pressures on the rest of society. They also forced widows to throw themselves on their husband's funeral pyre so the rest of the community would not have to care for them once their husbands died. Hindus therefore practiced population control through social exclusion and self-immolation.

Men, however weak, can challenge other men, however strong, but no man can challenge God. If it is God's will it cannot be challenged. It can only be obeyed. That is why the laws of civilization building and the genocide and crimes against humanity they imply have always been hidden behind God.

This too has its roots in shamanism. Shamans used their privileged positions and their purported ability to communicate with spirits to alleviate unrest and settle difficult issues in the community that could not be settled through consensus or through the authority of the chieftain. That is why a shaman's decision, which was made after conferring with the spirits or gods, could not be challenged by anyone and could only be obeyed blindly.

The blind obedience demanded by religious leaders has always been rooted in the need to hide their role in controlling population growth and not just the behavior of people.

When the profession of the shaman split into that of priests and doctors the authority to settle disputes through the intercession of divine forces passed onto the priest. From that moment on the oracle, who was a high priest, did what the shaman did in the past.

Decisions that would send countless people to war or to their death so the balance between people and resources could be restored became the purview of the high priest.

To this day and across cultures the parameters for population control are set by the high priests, thus by religious leaders, while the methodology of population control is devised and applied by doctors. And political leaders give them the legal and political cover they need to get away with crimes against humanity and genocide. And the paradox is that this is done for benevolent reasons because someone has to play God in human societies and keep life and death in balance just as God does in nature. Society is after all an artificial construct entirely of man's making and therefore entirely out of God's hands. And if someone does not take up this role societies invariably collapse.

Methods for Third Law

Let us now look at the methods of population control used to fulfill the objectives of the third law of civilization building, which states that once you get close to the planet's carrying capacity you have to stabilize the population in perpetuity and stabilize it at a level that is sustainable for any given planet, so the planet's life support systems are not damaged in which case intelligent life would unintelligently sow the seed of its own destruction.

With the secularization of society and the institutionalization of the population control program in the hands of the United Nations and its agencies at the international level and Ministries of Health at the national level, the justification for committing genocide and crimes against humanity to control population growth is no longer to appease the gods by incurring divine favor or avoiding divine retribution, but preventing nuclear war and more recently preventing environmental destruction.

From 1945 to 1990 nuclear deterrence was the front behind which population control hid. Once the Soviet Union fell apart, however, nuclear deterrence was no longer a viable front for population control. Nations were encouraged to poison their people into sterility and mortality to prevent resource scarcity and thus preempt war, which this time would have been nuclear and therefore catastrophic. The threat of nuclear annihilation may have been entirely manufactured by deep state collaboration between the US and the Soviet Union. There is plenty of evidence to suggest that.

From 1990 and until today the new justification is sustainability. Global warming or climate change is the new front behind which the depopulation genocide operates. Nations are now encouraged to poison their own people to prevent environmental destruction. The threat of global warming is certainly exaggerated and perhaps even a complete fiction invented to coerce nations to poison their own people into sterility and mortality because the world cannot survive the next doubling from 7 to 14 billion, which absent population control would happen in 20 to 30 years.

The ethical parameters for population control from 1945, when the UN was created, and until last year were set by the Vatican in its encyclical letter Humanae Vitae (Of Human Life), subtitled On the Regulation of Birth, issued by Pope Paul VI in 1968, but based on a decision made by Pope Pius XII who reigned from 1939 to 1958, the time when the UN was founded.

The Vatican created a loophole for secular authorities to subvert human fertility so as to prevent the moment of conception and in this fashion limit the number of births. This loophole is expressed in paragraph 15 of the encyclical letter Humanae Vitae under the heading “Lawful Therapeutic Means”, which says:

“On the other hand, the Church does not consider at all illicit the use of those therapeutic means necessary to cure bodily diseases, even if a foreseeable impediment to procreation should result there from – provided such impediment is not directly intended for any motive whatsoever.”

In other words the Church allows the sterilization of the population so long as it is done in the process of curing disease. Conscious of the fact that population growth needs to be stopped but unwilling to change its prohibition on the use of contraceptives, which would have enabled governments to legislate limits to family size, the Church allowed governments to involuntarily sterilize the people while healing them of disease.

Ever since, the population control program hides behind medicine and public health. This opened the gates of hell and made medicine and public health the handmaidens of genocide.

By barring doctors from interfering with life once the moment of conception has taken place, the priests have tied the hands of medicine and have forced doctors to concentrate their efforts on preventing the moment of conception from taking place, which is why westerners, and in the meantime much of the world, are being poisoned since 1945 with endocrine disruptors that are inserted in water, food, beverages and dental as well as cosmetic products so as to turn the basic elements of life into weapons of mass sterility and mass morbidity and in this fashion bring the number of births and the number of deaths in equilibrium, which results in a stable population.

To date more than 300 endocrine disruptors / depopulation poisons have been identified by the European Chemicals Agency (ECHA) alone and placed on a list of substances of very high concern to be phased out. They are everywhere: in food stabilizers, taste enhancers, preservatives, colorants, clothing, pharmaceuticals, plasticizers, insecticides, pesticides, herbicides, larvicides, fire retardants, adhesives, sealants, detergents, wetting agents, emulsifiers, foaming agents, carpets, stain repellents, polishes, paints, and even in toys.

To stay within the constraints of the Church, secular authorities unleashed the sterilizing power of fluoride under the pretext of combatting tooth decay and used false research and corrupt doctors to do so. Vaccines laced with the HCG hormone (human chorionic gonadotropin) are used under the false pretext of purportedly immunizing the populace against tetanus, pneumonia, and even the flu. GMOs imbued with sterilizing and carcinogenic glyphosates are pandered as the solution to vitamin deficiencies and world hunger. And a slew of psychotropic drugs, as well as statin medications and analgesics, designed to damage mitochondria so as to shorten lives, are pushed by Big Pharma on billions around the world for real and invented ailments.

The war on fertility and longevity fought for population control purposes by covert chemical and biological means and known euphemistically by the system as the demographic transition (the transition from high birth and death rates to low birth and death rates) has caused the epidemiologic transition, the transition from infectious to chronic diseases. This is the most significant medical discovery of this century and it is mine.

From 1945 until today, population growth has been controlled by undermining human fertility and to a lesser extent longevity by covert chemical and biological means. And medicine has been central to this hidden war on the human reproductive and immune systems. While modern medicine has spared us from war, the plague, monasticism, and mass burnings, it has caused all the modern illnesses we now suffer and die from: cancers, cardiovascular diseases, diabetes, obesity, neurodegenerative illnesses, immunodeficiency illnesses, developmental illnesses, and in the process has undermined the genetic and intellectual endowment of man.

What worked for the developed world, however, is not working for the developing world because it lacks the infrastructure, money, urbanization, political will and perversity necessary for depopulation by covert chemical poisoning. New methods have been devised to halt population growth in the developing world.

The World Health Organization’s Global Technical Strategy for Malaria 2016-2030 is the latest covert depopulation strategy devised by the UN system to force the total fertility rates of the last remaining growing countries down to replacement level under the cover of, and while at the same time, combating malaria. The chemical and pharmacological arsenal used to combat malaria and subvert fertility by chemoprophylaxis and vector control under the direction of the WHO poses great risks to health and even greater risks to society as it is aimed at stabilizing the still growing populations of the Americas, Eastern Mediterranean, Asia Pacific and Africa through involuntary and mass sterilization. The WHO Guidelines include prevention through vector control and treatment with antimalarials in a four-pronged approach:

1. Artemisinin-based Combination Therapy (ACT)
2. Indoor Residual Spraying (IRS)
3. Long-Lasting Insecticide-treated Net (LLIN)
4. Integrated Vector Management (IVM)

All four components deliberately use chemical and pharmacological compounds that are known ant fertility agents.

Every pandemic and epidemic since 1945, including the HIV/AIDS epidemic, has been caused or exacerbated by the depopulation lobby to be used as an opportunity for population control, which is why they have proliferated like mushrooms after the rain at a time when more money is invested in public health than at any other time in history, which should have resulted in fewer not more epidemics.

And this is especially true of the four “Public Health Emergencies of International Concern” (PHEIC for short) declared by Dr. Margaret Chan, the last Director-General of the WHO: the H1N1 flu virus (Swine Flu) that started in Mexico in 2009; the purportedly resurgent polio “extraordinary event” that started in Pakistan, Cameroon and Syria in 2014; the Ebola outbreak that started in West Africa also in 2014; and the Zika epidemic that started in Brazil in 2016.

Each of these manufactured crises has pursued multiple objectives, some legitimate and others illegitimate. What they have in common is that they are all based on no evidence about the clinical features, epidemiology and virology of reported but unconfirmed cases. In other words they are based on nothing. What they also have in common is that they have created opportunities for interventions of a classified nature by allowing the authorities to have physical contact with people year after year, which is particularly valuable for countries without cohesive and well developed infrastructure and where people, as a result, cannot be poisoned into sterility from afar by the state, as the West has done through water, salt, milk or dental fluoridation and through the adulteration of food and beverages with hundreds of endocrine disruptors.

Physical proximity to individuals allows the state to get close enough to its citizens for long enough to involuntarily sterilize and/or prematurely and slowly kill them selectively, as the need may be.

So long as population control is pursued in secret by the highest authorities rather than openly by the people themselves, periodic mass killings will be necessary to compensate for the incomplete success of the more humane methods of population control now in place, be they social –such as delayed marriage and the incorporation of women in the workforce; economic –such as delayed employment and the suppression of wages; legal –such as draconian laws that criminalize poverty and formerly acceptable social behaviors; chemical –such as the adulteration of the basic elements of life with endocrine disruptors; or pharmacological –such as the tetanus toxoid vaccines laced with sterilizing HCG antigens or the malaria drug Artemisinin which is a known sterilizant since antiquity.

The HIV/AIDS pandemic that has been ravaging Africa for the past thirty years is one such man-made mass killing event in the same tradition as the bubonic plague and the 1918 Spanish flu. Its main purpose was to increase death in a region where methods of birth prevention could not be implemented due to lack of political will and infrastructure. In the absence of low fertility to halt population growth high mortality would have to do the job. Its secondary purpose was to alter the sexual behavior of peoples and cultures that have not devised religious or social prescriptions to limit childbearing to marriage only and that due to sexual promiscuity have fertility rates that are environmentally unsustainable and economically undesirable. The fear of infection, it was hoped, would force Africans to wear condoms and in so doing unwanted pregnancies would be prevented.

The Ebola outbreak in West Africa, which is another man-made pandemic, targets a region of the world that has the highest fertility rates and where the population grows at a whopping 4% annual rate. The fear of infection and the fear of dying from Ebola allows the depopulation lobby to use the newly created Ebola vaccine to purportedly immunize all males and females of childbearing age while at the same time sterilize them.

The fourth and latest ‘public health emergency of international concern’ (PHEIC), declared by the WHO on 1 February 2016, the Zika epidemic in Brazil, is one of a kind, as it was not planned. Its primary and desperate objective is to prevent the world from discovering the true culprit for the increase in microcephaly in Brazil, namely the larvicide Pyriproxyfen, which has been dumped in the drinking water in the north-west of Brazil, and is a chemical of extraordinary importance to the UN system because it is a vital component of covert sterilization to the WHO’s Global Technical Strategy (GTS) for Malaria 2016-2030.

The Zika virus and the Aedes aegypti mosquito serve as scapegoats for microcephaly and allow governments in the region and the UN to capitalize on the fear and confusion generated by this unintended crisis to accomplish much-needed environmental, demographic and legislative objectives.

The Ministry of Health and the WHO know that Pyriproxyfen is teratogenic and causes malformations in young mosquitoes that prevent the development of adult insect characteristics and of reproductive organs to stop the proliferation of the Aedes aegypti mosquito. But neither the Ministry of Health nor the UN is about to recognize that the damage done to mosquito development from larva to pupa to adult by Pyriproxyfen is also done to humans in their development from zygote to embryo to foetus.

They are not about to admit it because Pyriproxyfen, a known sterilizant, is crucial to the population control agenda and 300,000 Pyriproxyfen-coated bed nets hang in every hut and over every bed of the UN Millennium Villages Project. They are not about to admit it because this chemical and the bed nets coated with it are manufactured by Sumimoto Chemicals, a strategic partner of Monsanto, the death company par excellence and the corporate pivot of the depopulation lobby, and because it is known that the longevity and survival rates of organisms treated with Pyriproxyfen are shorter and have significantly fewer progeny just as it is known that male flies sterilized with Pyriproxyfen can transfer their sterility to females by sexual intercourse, according to Sumimoto Laboratory’s own research and the same effect can be inferred for humans.

They will not admit it because a billion bed nets manufactured by Vestergaard and subsidized with UN funds are coated with a similar poison, Deltamethrin, which is a known neurotoxin and endocrine disruptor and listed as such by the EPA, as well as a known suppresser of spermatogenesis, but that nevertheless cover the beds of just as many families throughout the developing world. They will not admit it because the WHO mandates the use of these sterilizing, mutagenic and carcinogenic pyrethroid-based LLINs (long-lasting insecticidal nets) in its 2012 Global Plan for Insecticide Resistance Management in Malaria Vectors.

It is a lot more convenient to blame Zika than to assume responsibility for causing congenital malformations to an entire generation of children in the process of sterilizing them and their parents on the sly, especially when this poor excuse can be milked for all its worth to accomplish other hidden goals.

That health authority's use fear of Zika to combat population growth is fairly obvious despite great efforts to conceal this objective. Equally obvious is why Brazil singled out the northeast of the country to launch a chemical attack on human fertility.

The national total fertility rate of Brazil is safely below replacement level but national statistics fail to reveal regional differences. And Brazil's regional differences are significant. The northeast, which has the poorest and the brownest (62.5%) people in the country, also has significantly higher fertility rates than the rest of the country, approximately 2.4 children per woman compared to only 1.6 in the south where the population is 75% white. It is also the primary source of migrants for the Amazon region and the Brazilian government has pledged to stop and reverse the deforestation of the Amazon Basin.

The fear of Zika and the use of sterilizing chemicals in water (larvicide Pyroproxyfen) and air (fumigant Malathion) to presumably act as vector control for the Zika-carrying Aedes aegypti mosquito allow the Brazilian government to level the fertility scale between the south and the north.

To deny ulterior motive, the UN system and governments around the world, with the tacit support and implicit collusion of Church leaders, hide their attacks on fertility under the cover of plausible deniability. This cover is sustained by perverting science, falsifying research, abusing medicine, coopting the judiciary and legislative branches of government, controlling the message, censoring the media, corrupting state and international institutions, prostituting the faith, encouraging ignorance, promoting secrecy, compartmentalizing knowledge, violating the rule of law, and circumventing democratic checks and balances.

By artificially limiting life expectancy and the total fertility rate governments do not only stabilize the global population but also reduce the ecological footprint of every individual and of humanity as a whole, as well as ease the crushing dependency burdens expected in the fourth and especially fifth stages of the engineered demographic transition.

While the rationale is flawless the reality is disastrous because the desirable socio-economic advantages gained by these interventions during stage two and three of the demographic transition are short-lived and are followed by an avalanche of undesirable consequences in stages four and five: rapidly ageing populations, inverted population pyramids, shrinking workforce and revenues, declining productivity, crushing healthcare costs and dependency burdens, collapsing health, degraded DNA, enfeebled minds and bodies, mass dysfunction, counterfeit societies, genocidal governments, non-existent rights and liberties, dystopian institutions, a phony media, and a global police state.

All human and financial resources are currently used to survive the last stage of the demographic transition in the developed world and to advance the developing past the middle stage of the demographic transition.

And since I exposed their covert chemical methods of depopulation our governments and the UN system are attempting to replace them with covert biological methods of depopulation, namely vaccines, which is why they are being mandated and forced on anyone throughout life and for a growing list of maladies.

The latest generation of vaccines tampers with the genetic modulation of apoptosis ("the ability of cells to kill themselves by activating an intrinsic cell suicide program when they are no longer needed or become seriously damaged") thus disrupting or deleting genes crucial to spermatogenesis by depriving them of gonadotrophin and testosterone, hormones that are crucial to normal sexual development and reproductive function. Scarcity of these hormones results in infertility through accelerated germ cell apoptosis.

For instance, by targeting the Hsp70-2 gene, which plays a crucial role in meiosis, a dramatic increase in spermatocyte apoptosis is achieved, which results in male infertility but does not disrupt female fertility.

Germ cell apoptosis can also be triggered through non-hormonal regulatory stimuli, such as testicular toxins (of which Bisphenol A is the primary example along with hundreds of other endocrine disruptors used by the depopulation lobby in the adulteration of the food system), heat stress and chemotherapeutic agents. These extrinsic pathways for initiating apoptosis are being increasingly recognized in the pathogenesis of many non-communicable diseases including cancer, acquired immune deficiency syndrome, neurodegenerative disorders, atherosclerosis and cardiomyopathy.

The mechanism of apoptosis was not understood or described until 1972 and this knowledge was immediately put to use by the military-industrial complex, which is why the Swine Flu outbreak was triggered in 1976 to mass sterilize the American people and the HIV/AIDS epidemic was unleashed on the African people starting in 1978.

By inhibiting apoptosis through vaccines (intrinsic pathways) and endocrine disruptors (extrinsic pathways), the depopulation lobby has succeeded not only in causing sterility through gene disruption but also in increasing morbidity through cancers, autoimmune diseases, inflammatory diseases and viral infections, thus creating a self-reinforcing cycle for more vaccines and other medical interventions so the medical system could be used in perpetuity for population control purposes.

Methods for Fourth Law

Now that we know the methods of population control used by those in the highest echelons of power over the centuries and until today, and how medicine and public health fit in this picture, what do we do to ensure that at least henceforth we pursue population control, which is an inescapable prerogative, in a fair, intelligent, open, and beneficial way for all individuals and for human civilization as a whole?

How do we complete the objectives of the third law of civilization building, namely reach sustainability, which we must, and then pursue the objectives of the fourth law of civilization building, namely maintain sustainability while raising the standard of living of every human being on the planet, without committing genocide and crimes against humanity?

Because, make no mistake, the current methods of population control, just as those used in the past, violate at least four of the five subsections of article 2 of the Genocide Convention, which defines genocide as acts committed with intent to destroy in whole or in part a national, ethnic, racial or religious group by:

- (a) Killing members of the group;
- (b) Causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group;
- (c) Deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction in whole or in part;
- (d) Imposing measures intended to prevent births within the group;
- (e) Forcibly transferring children of the group to another group.

The first step has been taken, namely find a common denominator that we can all rally around and that demonizes and victimizes no one. That common denominator is the preservation of the environment, of our planet, our home. The first front used to hide the population control program, that of God, demonized man. The second front, nuclear deterrence, demonized the East by the West and vice versa pitting the world between two ideologies, communism and capitalism. The second step has also been taken, namely set new moral parameters for a reorientation of our civilization towards a new ethos.

The newest encyclical letter, Laudato Si (Praise be to you), subtitled “On Care for our Common Home”, takes the attention away from conception and focuses it on the environment, thus away from people to focus it on nature, therefore setting the moral parameters for a new matrix for our civilization, called integral ecology, which redefines the relationship between human beings and the natural world by recognizing that humans are integral to nature rather than nature being subject to human domination.

This new ethos of integral ecology calls for profound changes in lifestyles, models of production and consumption and the established structures of power that govern societies, thus for an ecological conversion so we can pursue sustainable and integral development and escape the existential crises that we now face: extreme economic disparity, competition for vital natural resources including land and water, a climate on the verge of collapse, a severely degraded natural world, failing nation states and a dehumanizing social and economic environment.

The third and fourth steps, however, have yet to be taken, namely create the institutional infrastructure necessary to govern the world towards sustainability according to the principle of integral ecology and enshrine this new ethos in our legal code to shape this new morality into concrete laws that govern our lives.

I have stated at the beginning of this speech that the fourth law of civilization building will lead to a New Axial Age, a Planetary Wellbeing Authority and a new socio-political model that I have tentatively called naturocracy.

In the ethos of integral ecology we see the beginning of a New Axial Age, a transformative age when old certainties lose their validity and new ones emerge.

But these new certainties need a new governing structure, a Planetary Wellbeing Authority mandated to stabilize the global population at a sustainable level, to share the world’s resources equitably among all 7.3 billion people, and to decarbonize the economy. The current governing structures are incapable of accomplishing these existential goals, these planetary security prerogatives without which sustainability and integral ecology are not possible.

And these new certainties need a new social, economic and political model that is clearly defined and that considers not just the needs of all human beings alive today but also the needs of all human beings that come after us and of all life on earth thus of all other species that cannot participate in our political process to express their needs.

This new socio-political model, that I have baptized “naturocracy” and defined in my book “The Future of Global Governance”, must have at its root a new trinity of goals: namely peace among men, harmony between man and nature, and continuity between this and future generations. Its scale and scope as well as its timeframe are far greater than the current social, economic and political models.

This is the grand horizon that has opened for mankind because I have put an end to civilization building via covert methods of depopulation and coerced methods of globalization. And it is with this grand horizon in mind that the medical profession must act. What does that mean in concrete terms?

1. First, that medicine and public health must be depoliticized so they no longer serve as the handmaidens of genocide. Doctors can do this by stating openly and in no uncertain terms, both as individuals and as a collective, that they will no longer be used to subvert fertility and longevity so that governments can accomplish hidden demographic and economic objectives. That will prevent those in power from continuing to rely on doctors to advance their demographic and geopolitical goals by perverting medicine and public health and harming the people.
2. Second, doctors must use their influence to push politicians to do what they are paid to do, namely legislate population control in the form of a population stabilization law with three components: replacement level fertility (that is to say two children per woman), assisted suicide, and optimal population levels. That will enable us to stabilize the population safely and humanely, breeze through the last stage of the demographic transition, and reach sustainability.
3. Third, purge the ranks of doctors who pervert medicine to subvert fertility and immunity and regain control of your organizations so you can regain control of the profession before it is too late and you irrevocably lose the people’s trust. That will for all intents and purposes cut off the hands and feet of the depopulationists who use doctors as their foot soldiers.
4. Fourth, demand an end to depopulation by vaccination and refuse to administer any and all vaccines until governments and the UN system state publicly that all vaccines have been cleansed and are no longer used to involuntarily sterilize the people and to weaken the immune system. That will force the system to quickly transit from covert to overt population control.
5. Fifth, rethink all procedures, treatments, protocols, drugs and vaccines to uncover their hidden population control aspects and to eliminate them from your practice. I have asked OMICS to start a new medical journal called “Medicine and Civilization” and to be its editor and I will publish every article that identifies where and how medicine has been perverted for population control purposes. This will restore the public’s trust in doctors, medicine and hospitals trust that is now at an all-time low.

6. Stop infringing on the parents’ right to make medical decisions on behalf of their children, however misguided you believe these decisions to be. Parents give life to their children and only parents can be the last arbiters of what is right or not for their children. And stop infringing on the patient’s rights to refuse medical procedures, treatments and drugs. This will restore parental rights over their children and the people’s rights over their own lives and bodies.

The time has come to free medicine from the heavy yoke of politics that has hung around the profession’s neck like a millstone since 1945 and has affected it for centuries. Doctors must preserve their role in civilization building but they must no longer allow religious and political authorities to insinuate themselves upon medicine with teachings, doctrines, dogmas, rules and laws that are antithetical to medicine’s foremost dictum, namely to do no harm.

As it is, medicine and public health have become not only handmaidens of genocide but the primary delivery agents for weapons of mass destruction and that is unacceptable.

References

1. Galalae KM (2015) the Subversion of Medicine and Public Health by International Security Prerogatives. Epidemiology (Sunnyvale) 5: 208.
2. Pope Paul VI (1968) Encyclical Letter Humanae Vitae: On the Regulation of Birth.
3. Galalae KM (2016) Close the Gates to Hell. Amazon.
4. Galalae KM (2013) Killing Us Softly: The Global Depopulation Policy. Progressive Press: USA.
5. Galalae KM (2014) Peace without Poison. Amazon: USA.
6. Galalae KM (2016) Behind the Mask: Malaria Eradication and Involuntary Sterilization. Malaria Control and Elimination 5: 1452.
7. Galalae KM (2016) Turning Nature against Man: The Role of Pandemics, Vaccines and Genetics in the UN’s Plan to Halt Population Growth. Epidemiology (Sunnyvale) 6: 2.
8. Galalae KM (2017) Restoring the Rule of Law: Legal Implications of Covert Population Control Measures. Epidemiology (Sunnyvale) 7:1
9. Pope Francis (2015) Encyclical Letter Laudato Si.
10. Galalae KM (2015) the Future of Global Governance. Amazon: USA.

Copyright: ©2018 Kevin Mugur Galalae. This is an open-access article distributed under the terms of the Creative Commons Attribution License, which permits unrestricted use, distribution, and reproduction in any medium, provided the original author and source are credited.